This is a classic case of communists using front groups to attract what Lenin called “useful idiots” to their cause. A leading (former) World Party (WWP) member, Brian Becker (above), is a key organizer. He is the National Director of the ANSWER Coalition and now “a founder of and a central organizer for the Party for Socialism and Liberation.” After recognizing yours truly, he denounced me as “right-wing media.” Becker is a supporter of the Stalinist North Korean Communist dictatorship.

Whereas the Soviets used to run influence operations through fronts such as the World Peace Council, the Russians use both “progressives” and “conservatives” as dupes in Moscow’s new propaganda offensive. The conservatives go along mainly because the Russians are cleverly portraying themselves as “family values” advocates and opponents of Islamic terrorism. Speakers at the “Rhodes Forum” events (above) have included Workers World Party leader Sara Flounders. The sponsor, Vladimir Yakunin, was the chief executive of Russian Railways and is a long-time ally of Russian president Vladimir Putin. A former KGB official, he is a key player in “active measures” operations.
